

Mission Engagement Ideas

1. Invite a community leader to share how COVID-19 is impacting your community, including the hopes and challenges of people in the community, and see how your church can be involved in transforming the community. This can be done using Zoom, Google Meetings, or whatever virtual platform your church is accustomed to.
2. This is a good time to gather leaders of the congregation virtually to create a mission plan and possibly launch or re-launch a mission committee to actively engage your church in missions. What are the passions, gifts, and assets within your congregation and community? Who are your existing community partners? How is your church positioned to help meet the needs of the community in the midst of COVID?
3. Partner with other churches to help address needs that have been illuminated by COVID-19. For instance, food security is an increasing need as schools have closed and people face unemployment. To help address this need, you could partner with a church that has a food pantry to see how your congregation can support or supplement their efforts.
