Characteristics of a Disciple of Jesus Christ - ALL ANSWERS

What are the characteristics of a passionate faithful disciple of Jesus Christ?

Characteristics of disciples of Jesus Christ

(Open ended question)

When given a chance to put it in their own words (approximately 450 responses to each open-ended question), survey responders said this:

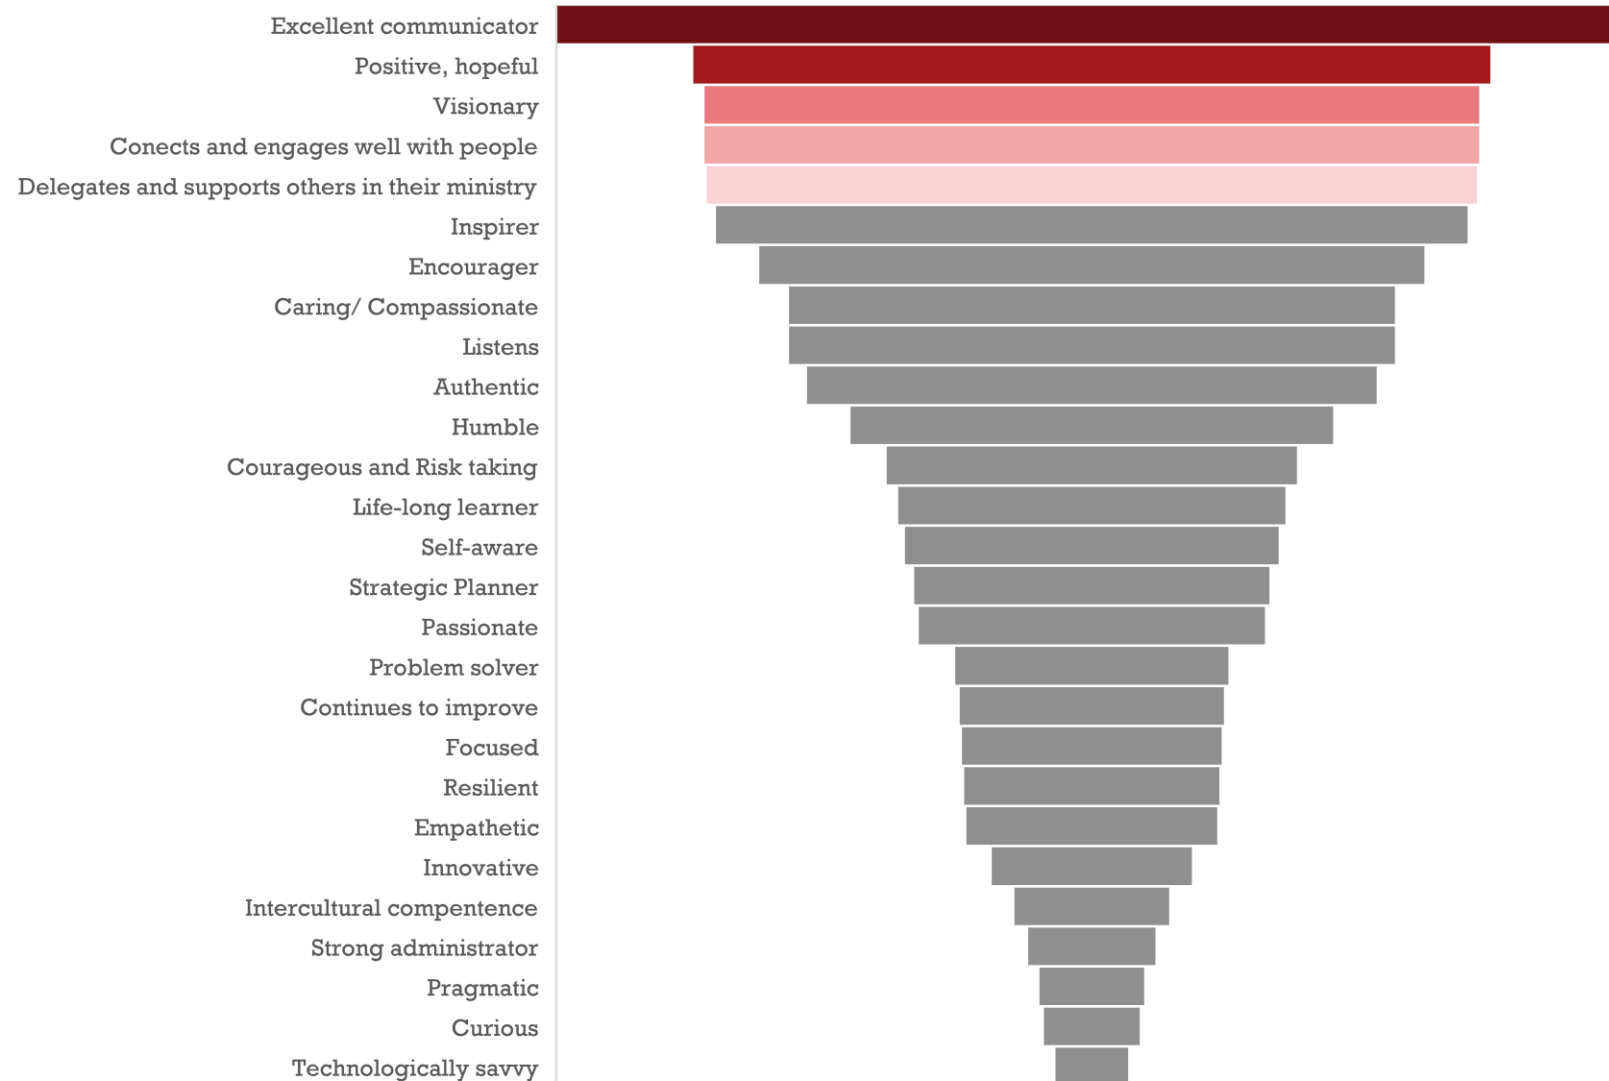

Passionate Disciples (Questions # 6) are completely in love with God and have a deep love for all people. Their personal relationship with Jesus Christ directs all that they do and is something they are quick to speak about. The Holy Spirit works through them. (Though none of the responses was specifically Trinitarian, corporately: it's all there!) A commitment to spiritual disciplines is evident; frequently mentioned was Bible Study, corporate worship, and prayer. Service to community is a high priority, sometimes referred to as “justice” ministries. They seek continual spiritual and intellectual growth: lifelong learners, pursuing obedience to the Word. Compassion and generosity characterized these persons, as well as a commitment to risk for the sake of Christ (aware of the cost of discipleship.)

Several summary comments about Passionate Disciples:

- Seek the kingdom of God above all else, following the footsteps of Jesus
- Love of God and sacrificial love of neighbor (as Jesus instructed)
- Service and Justice ministries

Characteristics of a Transformational Leader – ALL ANSWERS

What are the characteristics of a leader who leads positive change, growth and development in people and leads congregations to health and vitality?

Characteristics of a leader

(Open ended question)

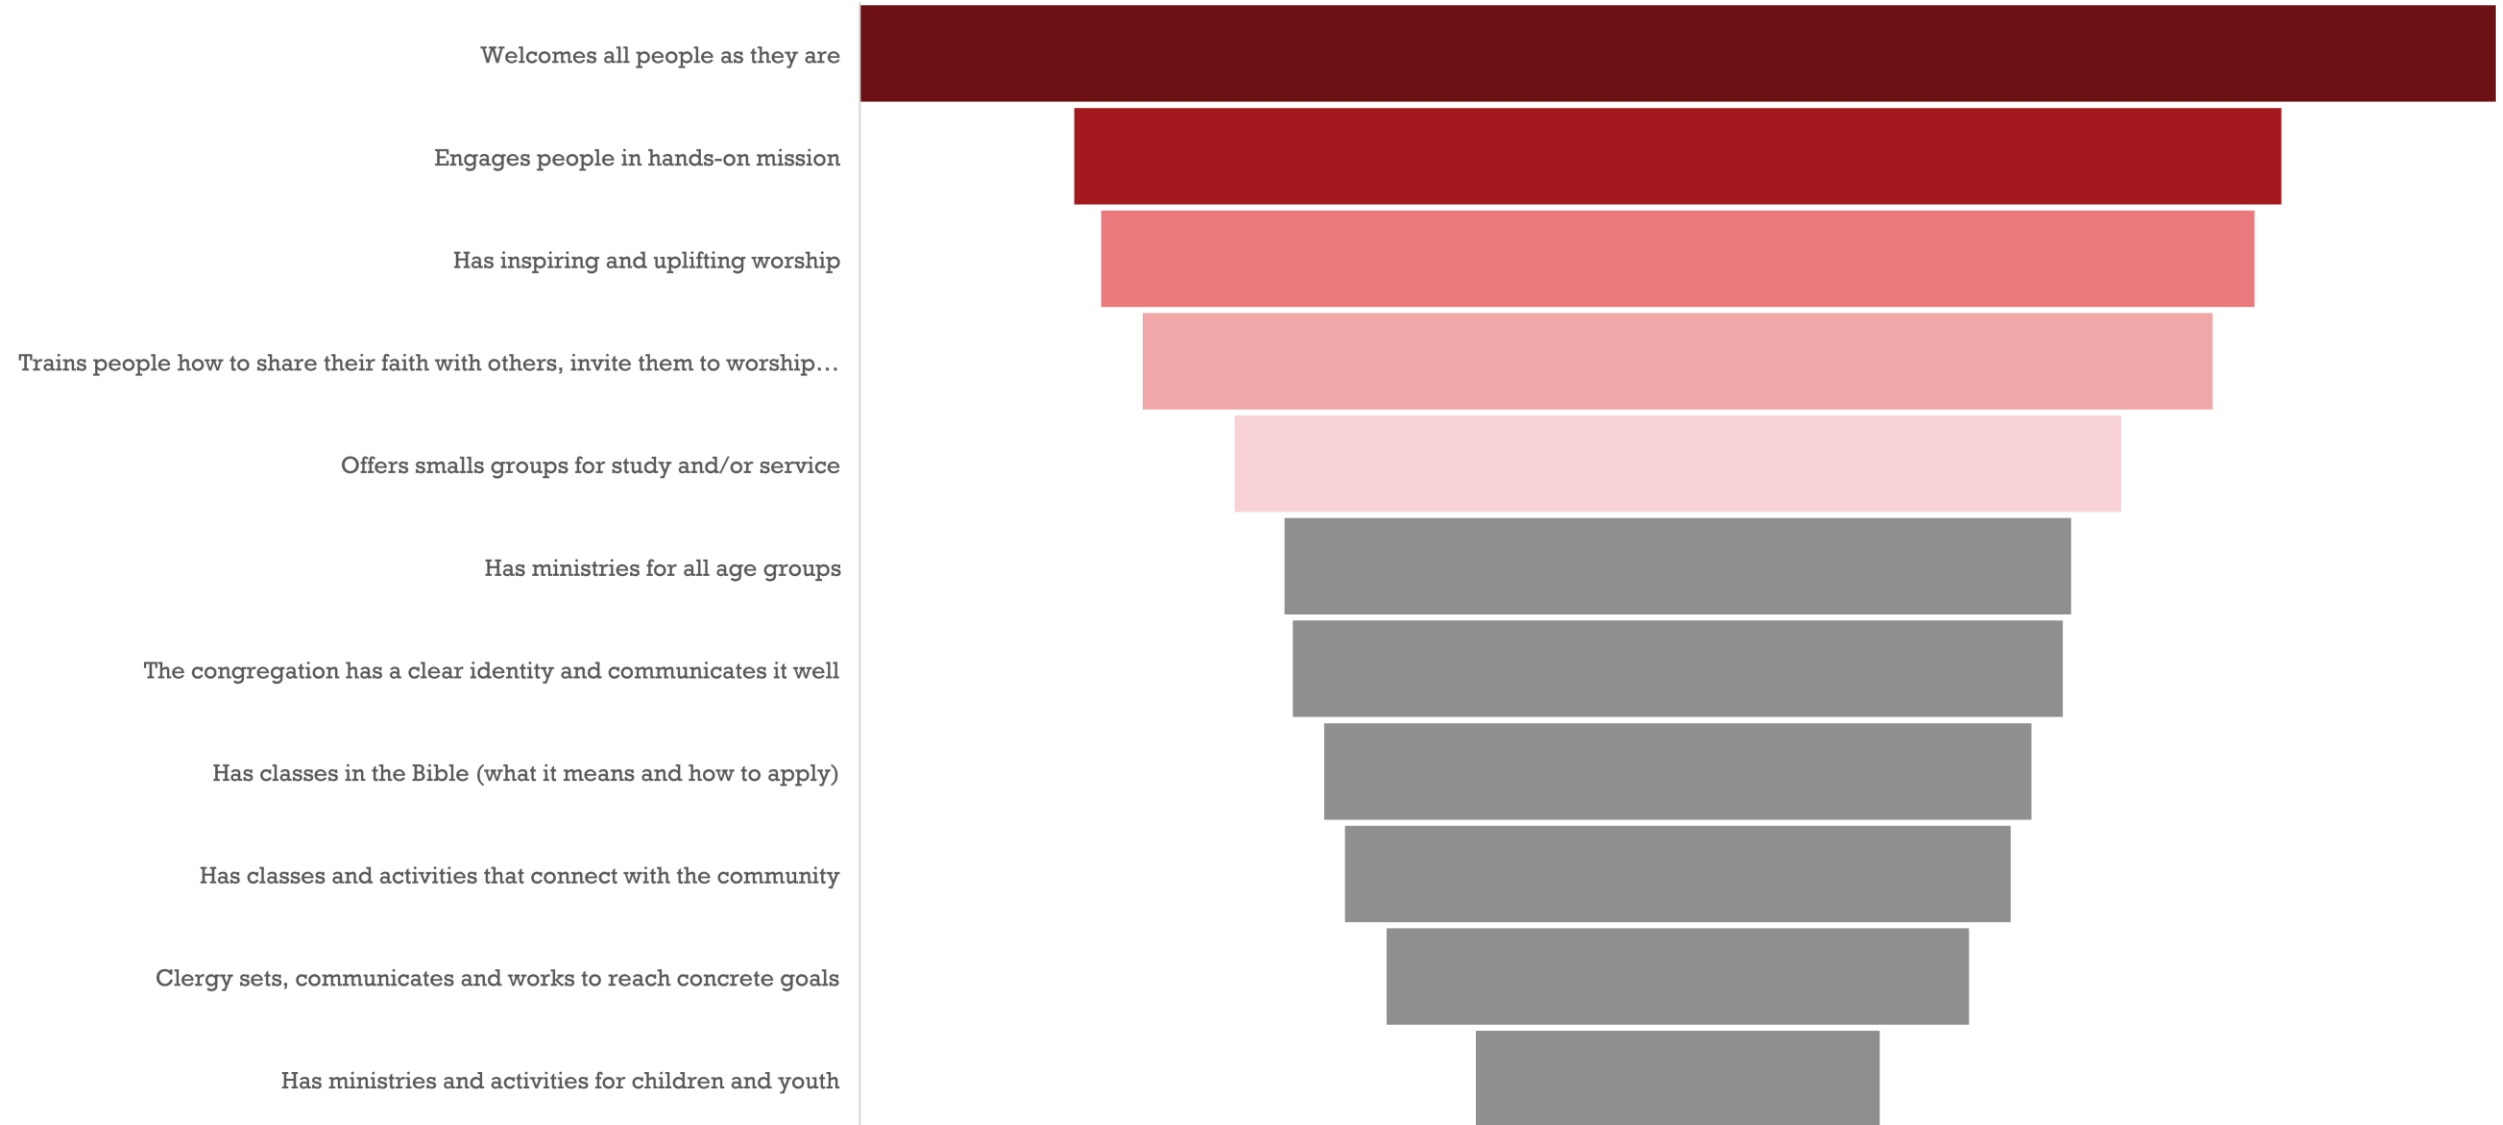

When given a chance to put it in their own words (approximately 450 responses to each open-ended question), survey responders said this:

Transformational Leaders (Question #8) are spiritually-grounded, Spirit-led. They have a clear vision for the congregation, and they communicate it often & well. Personal integrity (character) is critical: they are reliable role models (she practices what she preaches). Mobilizing the people for action is as important as the action itself: employing the gifts of the congregation and the development of teams. They operate out of a servant mindset. Key qualities include humility, industry (hard work), relational skills, and enthusiasm. They are excellent listeners, not afraid of change, well-organized, and committed to lifelong learning.

Several summary comments about Transformational Leaders:

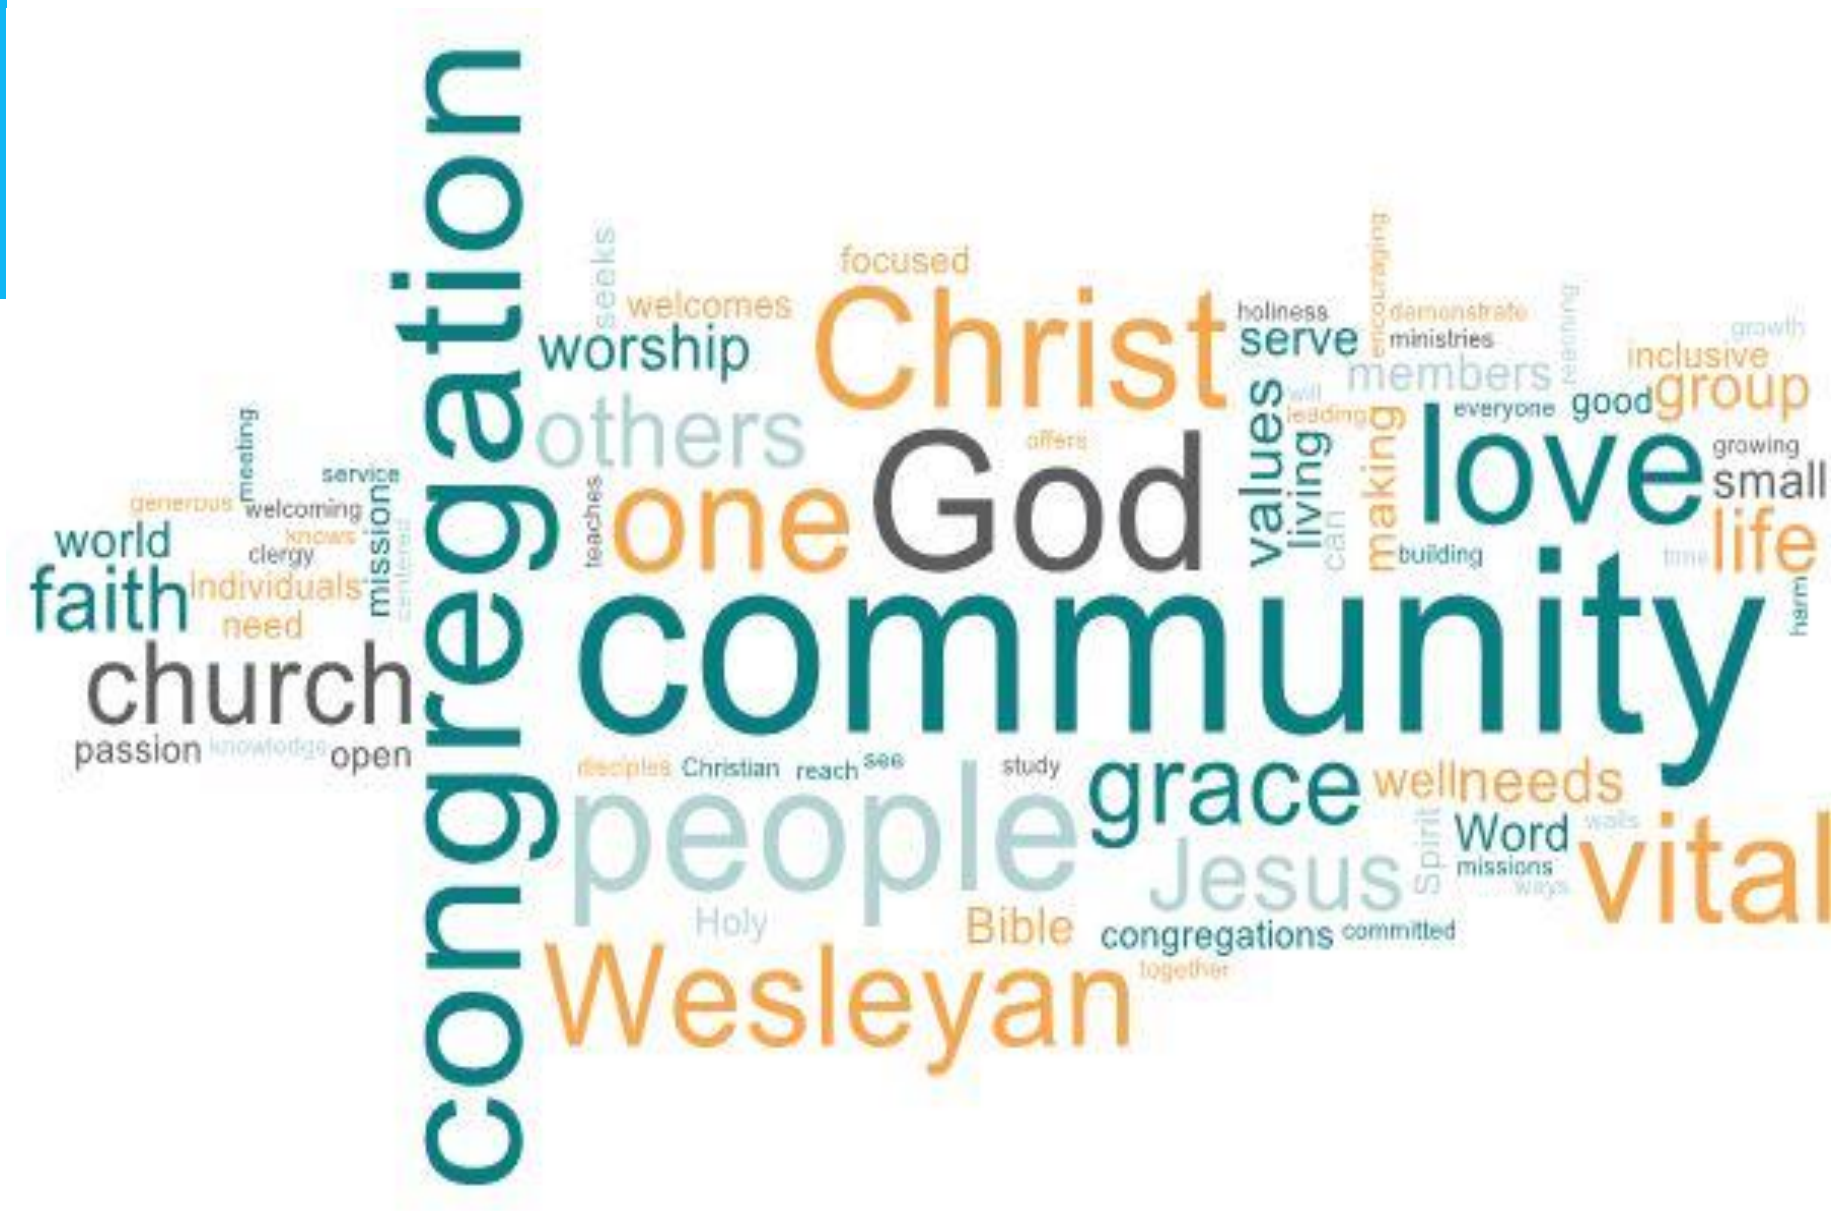

- Presents a compelling vision and gets folks excited, moving in that direction
- One who encourages others, leads by example, and provides direction
- Able to discern the gifts & talents of the people, and bring those to maturity in the kingdom
- Engenders a desire in others to become passionate disciples
- Someone who keeps their eye on the prize, whose commitment & vision excite others to share the goal, and who can project-manage (or delegate) to assure success

Characteristics of a Healthy Congregation

Characteristics of a Healthy Congregation

(From the open-ended question)

Characteristics of a Healthy Congregation

(Open ended question)

When given a chance to put it in their own words (approximately 450 responses to each open-ended question), survey responders said this:

Vital Wesleyan Congregations (Question # 10) demonstrate a commitment to welcoming all of God's people. Inspirational worship centers all that they do, enhanced by weeklong opportunities for spiritual formation in small group gatherings. Participants look to the holy scriptures for guidance and comfort. Community ministry & service to others is the heartbeat of the people.

Several summary comments about Vital Congregations:

- Equal commitment to personal and social holiness
- Grace-filled, does no harm, does good, stays in love with God
- Loves & serves Christ, each other, the community and world
- The people "go and do" rather than "sit and listen"
